Tibisay Felida

Isis woont op Curaçao en lijkt op het eerste gezicht een heel gewoon en alledaags leventje te leiden op een Caribisch eiland. Haar leven reikt echter ver buiten de grenzen van wat we de realiteit noemen: regelmatig maakt Isis uitstapjes naar de magische wereld van Aruc.

Ze is een nakomeling van Alice Kyteler, die in de 13de eeuw wegens beschuldiging van hekserij vanuit Ierland naar een andere werkelijkheid vluchtte. Acht eeuwen later blijkt de jacht op heksen nog steeds actueel. Isis moet uitkijken voor haar burens en medekerkgangers. Wat kunnen de gevolgen zijn als ze niet oppast?”

Auteur Tibisay Felida schrijft een intrigerend boek over een magisch plek die zich bevindt buiten de werkelijkheid. Find more info here.

Cutting-edge agriculture on Curacao

A new development on Curacao in the field of agriculture.

Syntropic farming is a system of farming that imitates how plants grow in their natural ecology. The philosophy is that nature itself grows towards a state maximum productivity. By emulating nature, syntropics may maximize the use of naturally available water.

The goal for Curacao is to boost local food production at minimum water use, leading to a self-sufficient island.

Curacao's first class on syntropics, "Ban Planta Awa", was held in November 1st. In the future, education will be available across the island so every Curacao resident can grow their own healthy food at maximum productivity. This may ultimately increase opportunities for local markets and economy.

For more information and online classes, visit Facebook group "Curacao Syntropic Farming".

Creating a Sustainable Community for All

Communities have always formed the basis for a thriving society.

What will allow us to thrive and not simply survive on our current island of Curacao or the world at large for that matter—full of planetary threats to its well-being?

Sustainable Community Curacao is a platform for info-sharing and uniting around the same goals: to effect change for the better for us and the world, as we believe this power is within all of us.

Our main activity is to unite all interested in developing a sustainable lifestyle in a network and to link our ideas together to make things happen. Currently, this is happening in establishing gardens for abundance through syntropics. We will continue this work by inviting everyone to join in and help us address community issues such as water and waste,

The key lies in community: sustainability means inclusivity. Get in touch!

New Aquaponics Course at Kura di Arte

An educational program on aquaponics was launched in October by Kura di Arte in collaboration with Curacao Agrotech. The program aims to enable citizens, schools, businesses or anyone interested to build their own aquaponic system at home.

Aquaponics is a modern, integrated system for growing plants and raising fish in a single set-up. This reduces water costs and allows year-round harvest of fresh food.

As a sample, attendants were treated to fresh salad and herbal tea from Kura di Arte's system.

The philosophy of Kura di Arte is to have home aquaponics systems in every garden. To achieve this goal, the program is set to continue on a yearly basis.

Dushi Curacao

This new mirador is at Seru di Domi

Our island combines all: nationalities, language, culture.

Next photo shows old 'landhuis' building in Otrabanda reflected in the glass front of an office building.

Old and new, in front of each other.

Living in harmony.

If you have not visited Curacao in a long time:
There is a lot to be explored!
